Willows Consulting completes new website design and development for CityJet

Willows Consulting have completed a new website design for CityJet. The design is a departure from other airline sites presenting a clear and professional look and feel to reflect the client base of CityJet.

The website has been developed using open-source web technologies in which Willows Consulting specialize. The website includes a full featured online document manager enabling suppliers to access documents and images from a secure central repository.

Advanced traffic analytics are active on the site allowing CityJet to maximize and locate new and emerging trends as driven by web surfers.

Sean Owens MD of Willows Consulting says, "The CityJet website proves that open source web based solutions are now of a standard to delivery serious cost savings to large organisations while not compromising on quality.” Willows Consulting are a web development agency specializing in the development, and customisation of web based open source applications. Founded in 2003 it is headed up by Sean Owens and Aine Williams with a staff of 7 located in Ireland and Poland.

Willows Consulting has a client base of 150+ and provides open source application development and training.
